

Turkey's formal assent to the proposed reforms in Armenia is a purely diplomatic act. Her Christian subjects know how she has acted up to such promises in the past. Such an agreement may be very acceptable to the Powers, who are more anxious about their own relations to each other than anything else. It is queer to see even some New York newspapers treating the Armenians as enemies of law and order. The Turk as a responsible guardian of these things is something beyond conception.

---