

The news from Armenia is very bad indeed. The outrages reported from that unhappy region recall the Bulgarian horrors with painful exactness. The stories are too many and too well supported to be wholly mythical. The reputation of the Kurds for cruelty is as well established as the reputation of the Turkish Government for feebleness and ineptitude. There is only too much reason to believe that while the European commission is investigating in certain quarters under Turkish guidance, the cruelties and massacres are going on in adjoining valleys. What has become of the Berlin treaty and why are its provisions not enforced?
