

---

Each new day brings some new confirmation of the first reports of Armenian atrocities. Not even the traditional friends and apologists of the "unspeakable Turk," as Carlyle called him, venture longer to deny that there has been a dreadful slaughter of the Christian population. Whatever action may or may not be taken by this Government, there is no reason why the American public should not let its feeling on the subject be known. The mass-meeting to be held on Tuesday night should be a large and representative one, and should express in no uncertain tones the horror and indignation of a civilized people at crimes that are a scandal to humanity.

---